Lindsay is an associate in Weiner Brodsky Kider's litigation practice group, where she represents corporate clients in the financial services and mortgage industries on a variety of matters. Lindsay defends clients against complex commercial and class action litigation arising under state and federal lending laws, including claims brought under various federal consumer protection statutes, such as RESPA and TCPA. In addition, her practice includes defending mortgage originators against qui tam lawsuits brought under the False Claims Act. Lindsay also provides counsel to mortgage companies in connection with investigations and enforcement actions brought by regulators, such as the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Department of Veterans Affairs.
